Two men, believed implicated in burglaries in Salem, escaped last night after a chase with the patrolmen. The chase began at 1:45 a. m. today, after officers came upon the men in the act of breaking into a parked automobile on South Broadway.

Mont. Veon reported seeing a strange car parked alongside a machine owned by Lou Schiff. One of the men was in the act of breaking into the car when patrolmen drove upon scene, Chief Ralph N. Stoffer said.

The men took to the streets and immediately jumped into their automobile and sped up Broadway, down East side, up North Lincoln to Sugar alley, with the patrolmen in hot pursuit. At Ellsworth ave., the men turned north at Fourth and attempted to turn right but skidded on the icy pavement.

The police tried to corner the car but their car grates as did the other and came to a stop against a curb. While Gaunt and Veon were getting out of their car, the patrolmen wheeled around and made a dash for the fleeing men. Gaunt and Veon slipped on the ice and emerged from the cruiser, and from the ground where he had been.

Chief Stoffer said this morning that the patrolmen were not able to tell whether they had hit either of the men, but that they did know at the 10 shots they fired undoubtedly pierced the body of the machine. "One of the men may have been wounded," he said.

License Plates Stolen

The patrolmen obtained the license number of the car and later found it to be stolen plates, originally issued to Arnold Neff, of R. S. Youngstown. The men drove a green 1932 Oldsmobile sedan.

Mahoning county officers have been notified to be on the lookout for the car. A bus driver stopped at police headquarters this morning and reported having seen the machine a short time after the chase, at the intersection of streets 7 and 14, east of Columbiana.

Chief Stoffer advanced the theory that the men, believed to be from Youngstown, were responsible for the burglaries and thefts committed in Salem.

Hit by Automobile

MARIETTA, O., Dec. 18.—Dorothy Trippett, 17, of Mount Clare, Va., was in a hospital here today, recovering from, surgeons said, a skull fracture and a broken right leg, received when he was hit by an automobile near Beipre, O. Sunday night.

He was riding a bicycle, attempting to avoid striking Trippett, Gordon Campbell, Marietta, driver of the car, according to state highway patrolman, drove his car over an embankment, but was not seriously hurt. He was exonerated.

Betty Gow Rumored On Way to America

LONDON, Dec. 18.—Rumors that Betty Gow, former Lindbergh nurse, was headed for the United States as a witness in the murder trial of Bruno Hauptmann, caused a wide-spread check today as to where Miss Gow might be.

The rumors said she was on the Anchor liner Caledonia and on the S. S. Aquitania, both of which are headed for New York. The rumor regarding the latter ship, however, was pretty well dissipated when its purser answered "not on board" to a radio query.

The mystery was all the deeper because the former nurse has, for months past, avoided the public generally at her home in Glasgow.

(By Associated Press)

CANTON, Dec. 18.—County authorities today were investigating the death of a seven-year-old boy, second grade student in the Middlebranch school, who was crushed to death Monday under the rear wheel of a school bus from which he had just alighted.

He was Ray Dickerhoof, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dickerhoof of near Middlebranch.

William J. Bair, driver of the bus and a former member of the Middlebranch board of education, was exonerated by Coroner T. C. McQuate.

The boy, with his twin brother, Ray, and another brother and sister, alighted from the bus in front of their home. The two brothers crossed the road at the rear of the bus. The other boy jumped across a ditch after alighting and then attempted to jump back into the highway, it is believed, and slipped on the icy highway. He died of a broken neck and crushed chest.

300 Attend Service At Baptist Church

More than 300 persons attended the gospel service in charge of the Cleveland City Mission group last evening at the Baptist church on East State st.

Jack Vandall of Akron, composer and singer, gave a series of gospel hymns among which were popular Negro spirituals and "Home Sweet Home" (gospel hymn).

The "Jail Birds" sang several musical selections. They received their name because of the many concerts they have given in jails throughout the country. They were led by Douglas Hines. The accompanist was Mrs. Jack Vandall.

Rev. George Soerheide, superintendent of Cleveland City Missions, preached the sermon and his subject was "The Life Story of Mel Trotter," a noted Mission worker of Grand Rapids, Mich.

The child was taken to City hospital.

LIQUOR BOARD DENIES APPEAL FOR TRANSFER

Rules On Disputed Permit In Anna Lucas Comanisi Case

MUST FIND OTHER TRANSFEREE SOON

Otherwise Board to Act
On City Solicitor's
Evidence

N. A. Parr of Columbus, assistant state liquor director, today rejected the application of Mrs. Anna Lucas Comanisi to transfer her disputed liquor permit to Stephen Tarzan, Jr.

Wellington Leonard, chairman of the liquor board, said that, as a result, unless Mrs. Comanisi finds a satisfactory transferee soon, the board will act on new evidence in her case.

This consists principally of a photostatic copy of a birth certificate showing Mrs. Comanisi is not 21 years old.

Leonard did not indicate what the board decision might be nor were any particular reasons advanced for refusing to permit the proposed transfer to Tarzan.

Parr's announcement is the first following third re-hearing in the case almost two weeks ago in Columbus, at the request of the city.

In connection with the hearing at that time, when City Solicitor Lozier Caplan presented a photostatic copy of Mrs. Comanisi's birth certificate from Dayton church, the defense also filed a request for permission to transfer the license to Tarzan.

Yugoslav Body Resigns
After Action By Foreign Minister

BELGRADE, Dec. 18.—The entire Yugoslav cabinet resigned today shortly after the resignation of Bogolyub Yevitch, the foreign minister, who conducted settlement at Geneva of the recent crisis with Hungary.

Bitterness engendered by the failure of his political rivals in the cabinet to accord a more enthusiastic reception to his report on the events at Geneva prompted Yevitch to leave the government.

Yevitch's action precipitated a cabinet crisis which resulted in the resignation of the entire body, including aged Premier Nikola Uzunovitch, one of the foreign minister's political adversaries.

Suspect Arrested

TIFFIN, O., Dec. 18.—Joseph Thill, 21, was under arrest here today as a suspect in several Postoria robberies and a shooting in nearby Bellevue. O. Sheriff Verne F. Deats said Thill had been identified as one of two men who robbed the Youman drug store, Nov. 21.

Robert Dalzell, 24, Clyde, O., is held in Norwalk, O., in connection with the cases.

Break Up Gang

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 18.—Conviction here of Perd G. Wolf, of Columbus, on a counterfeiting charge, broke up a gang that was formed in the U. S. reformatory at Chillicothe, government agents said.

Dee Baker, 29, already under indictment for complicity in Indiana police told the court Wolf had passed bogus $5 silver certificates.

Thomas T. Stach, another member of the alleged ring, entered a guilty plea and will be sentenced with Wolf, Dec. 28, unless Wolf files an appeal.

Wolf served a term in the reformatory, beginning in 1931.

The plan will be laid before the 91st general assembly which convenes in January, he said.

ACCUSE LAWYER IN KIDNAP CASE

Government Prosecutors Take Action Against Denver Attorney

By CHARLES H. KLINE
Associated Press Staff Writer

DENVER, Colo., Dec. 18.—An affidavit outlining the manner in which Ben Laska, veteran Denver attorney allegedly received part of the Charles F. Urschel ransom money was disclosed today by government prosecutors.

The sworn narrative, from the stepson of one of the kidnapers, was disclosed in connection with the filing of complicity charges against the attorney.

Represented Bates

Laska, gray-haired pleader for the defense in half a hundred "hopeless" causes, represented Albert L. Bates, one of 16 persons convicted in the $209,000 kidnaping of the Oklahoma City millionaire. New Laska is in custody—temporarily at least—fighting an indictment against him and James C. Mathers of Oklahoma City for splitting the spoils of the crime.

Woven around an affidavit from Edward G. Feldman, stepson of Bates, is this outline of the governor's case:

Bates told Feldman and Clara Feldman, Bates' wife, where to go. Then, the affidavit related Laska allegedly directed the woman and young man to cache $75,000 in Wyoming and received a map of where the treasure was buried. Then, the affidavit related Laska was given $10,000 for "expenses" in a transaction boldly executed in the bedroom of the attorney's home.

Of four hundred $20 bills handed over in the bedroom, the affidavit stated $2,000 went to the lawyer in Oklahoma City, and $1,000 was described as being placed under a hotel carpet there for Mathers.

The $2,000 payment was reluctantly received, said Feldman, for he was unsuccessful in following Laska's instructions to have ran for Mathers.

HUEY CONTROLS TEACHERS, TOO

Bill Places Their Jobs
At Whim of State Board

(By Associated Press)

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 18.—Fifteen thousand Louisiana school teachers will be drawn into the Huey Long dictatorship if the 33 bills he sponsors are enacted Thursday by the special session of the legislature. They would become effective 20 days later.

The "joker" in one bill, placing the jobs of all teachers in the state at the whim of a long-controlled board, was unnoticed for the first two days of the session.

State House Buzzes

The state house buzzed over the measure today as the house prepared to pass the bills and send them to the senate for reference to committee before the upper body considers them Thursday.

The house probably will concur in all amendments the same day, and another of Long's special sessions—the third this year—will be finished.

When the "teacher patronage" bill came before the house yesterday, means committee yesterday. Long sketched explained it merely gave the state budget committee power to compel parishes to allow children from other parishes to attend their schools.

Printed copies of the bill revealed the act also granted the budget committee supervision of the appointment of all school teachers.

That committee is composed of Gov. O. K. Allen, State Superintendent of Education T. H. Harris and State Treasurer J. S. Cave, all elected with Long's support.

Packed With Dynamite

Other bills were packed with as much dynamite. A number prescribed punitive measures for the New Orleans administration of Mayor T. Semmes. Walmsey, Long's antagonist in the "armed" September primary, which Long's forces won.

Still others in the hopper carried along the senator's banner of "hit the corporations" and help the "poor folks."

For the third time this year Long raised the corporation franchise tax to bring in a half million dollars in added revenue with which he plans to establish schools of dentistry and pharmacy at New Orleans. The present act increases the tax from $150 to $200 on each $1,000 capital stock.

There was talk about the capital that Long was planning a new coup by tacking an amendment on an apparently harmless bill dealing with state liquor levies and exempting Louisiana-made wines from taxation.

This session of the legislature convened Sunday night. If all goes well for the "kingfish," it will end Thursday with the new laws taking effect on Jan. 8.

Big Figures

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 18.—The other night over the radio for the Salvation Army, I was blathering away about a short piece I had read in the paper that very night, telling of a plan to give everybody work. Well, friends been kidding me since then. "Will, where is your plan you was telling about?"

Well, today it broke out; it was gotten up by the National Resources Board. It plans to spend $105,000,000.00. (Now all those noughts belong on there—that 105 is billions) and it's called a "plan to end all planning." That will knock these old rich boys in the creek that have been hoarding about a debt of a more 28 billions. This is a plan to do away with all small figures.

Yours,
Will Rogers

PLANNING: THE TERM DEFINED

If one thing be certain about the report on national planning and public works which was big news Monday, it is that the report will be misunderstood more often than it will be understood. This is inevitable because of the size of the field covered and the comprehensiveness of the proposals submitted. Ordinary persons will be like the blind men and the elephant. They will interpret only what they happen to come into contact with, and it may be an unimportant detail.

Critics of the new deal, which has identified itself closely with both national planning and public works, will reach instinctively to evidence that the report is advance agent of an age of close regimentation under a cumbersome central bureaucracy. This is only one of many possible misinterpretations of the vast collection of material and conclusions contained in the report. It is properly the subject for prolonged study, certainly not for snap judgment.

Study would start properly with the definition of planning on which the national resources board based its conclusions. This definition probably will get little attention. Parts of it are reprinted in the following paragraphs for the sake of reassuring apprehensive readers who are confident they are about to sacrifice all their liberty to an aggressive faction of theorists in Washington.

"Planning consists in the systematic, continuous, forward-looking application of the best intelligence available to programs of common affairs in the public field, as it does to private affairs in the domain of individual activity," the report states. Planning does not entail wholesale regimentation of private life, the report makes clear. It is, rather, a way to bring about a fresh release of opportunities. "Those with special privileges to protect and preserve naturally object to any public planning that may dislodge them from a preferred position where they are able to exact tribute from their fellow men," the report observes.

"Planning is not an end," one may read, "but a means, a means for better use of what we have, a means for emancipation of millions of personalities now fettered, for the enrichment of human life in ways that will follow individual interest or even caprice. We may plan indeed for fuller liberty and are so planning now. When men express sincere opposition to all governmental planning, it can only mean a grave misunderstanding of what planning really is, or an opposition to some special detail of planning that seems undesirable, rather than to the general principle."

Here is a clear statement of purpose. Perhaps it may be more idealistic than mere men can accomplish. While it stands unaltered, however, it is qualified to serve as an answer to all who suspect ulterior motives behind the momentous and monumental report of the national resources board. National planning, after all, is less a part of the new deal than it is of the dreams of all men who dare to think of what might have been and what still might be if the United States were to employ its resources in the interest of the nation, instead of the exploiters of separate generations.

LONG-SUFFERING LOUISIANA

Growth of Sen. Huey Long's Louisiana dictatorship is to be given additional impetus this week with passage of two-score bills drawn by the senator and passed under his orders. In no other state of the union could there be so much certainty that the program desired by the political boss would be enacted without effective interference.

It is generally believed by critical observers, both inside and outside Louisiana, that Sen. Long has begun definitely a campaign calculated to feed his political ambition with richer food than Louisiana can offer. This explains why he is being given more attention than he was getting as recently as a year ago. Gen. Long has become more than a grotesque comedian in democracy's serious pageant. He has made himself a vital character in the plot of the times.

Stronger, more aggressive and quicker of wit than most of the men with whom he is dealing, he has withstood their efforts to unseat him. He has refused to be laughed out of countenance. After four years in national politics, he commands as much attention as any man in the U. S. senate, despite a deliberate campaign to make him an ineffective political influence.

Among his plans for Louisiana is erection of a powerful radio station, ostensibly for the purpose of advertising Louisiana State university. Radio in Europe has become the principal weapon of dictatorship. With a gagged press and an unobstructed air channel, the dictator has the equivalent of a million highly efficient troops scattered among the people. Fantastic? What other interpretation can be placed on events in Louisiana? Their significance is more than local.

THE STARS SAY

For Wednesday, December 19

According to the planetary configurations bearing rule on the affairs of this day there should be matters of major importance in connection with mergers, rings, secret societies, or by methods of diplomacy, intrigue, or conspiracy. While the aspect is favorable, yet there is need for precaution in signing documents, contracts and private correspondence.

In social, domestic or affectional relations there is sign of inharmonious or other complication or disturbance.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of important contacts, being favored by those in high places or authority, especially in combines, mergers, or secret bodies. It would be well, however, to be alert to possibilities of fraud, treachery or misrepresentation. In purely personal affiliations there is need for handling affairs with tact and discretion.

A child born on this day should be efficient, ambitious and should rise to important position in life. Notable nativity: H. C. Frick, steel magnate.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Greenwich Village, for no particular reason, has taken on a sudden sparkle. New electric signs are flashing everywhere. Cafes, coffee dens and waffle parlors and the Mama Bertolotti type of red ink table d'hotes are almost as packed as they were after the armistice. Too, there is a cafe litteraire.

Some attribute the renaissance to the return of the prodigals—the artists, sculptors and writers who rushed from Paris and other European capitals with the drop of the dollar. Many lads and lassies of Du Dome, Rotonde and Select are to be seen.

Also many from fashionable neighborhoods uptown with reduced incomes have fled to the peaceful serenity of The Village as a sort of cyclone cellar until the storm blows over. There are fewer apartments to rent there than in almost any other metropolitan area.

The cafe influx which includes the uptown restaurateur, Will Oakland, has brought many band-box specialty shops like those on Madison. The sidewalk cafe is to whoop this Spring. And the Village has also attracted Lee Posner, whose three-sheeting was supposed to have incubated Harlem slumming.

Of horror chirography from Greeley's Alpine scrawl to Noel Coward's mincing flourish, the least decipherable is Walter Lippmann's. Aside from the pinched-up precision of a minute steel engraving it has an exasperating sameness of letters that drives printers to despair. Most of it must be read through a microscope, if at all.

Likely no restaurant in New York, with the possible exception of the Colony, attracts more of the leisurely gourmets than L'Aiglon, a hopskip from Fifth avenue. It is Parisian in softened pretensions, with M. Louis in self-effacing tip-toe guiding waiters by eye lifts and quick nods. Among the finicky feeders I noticed at various tables were Dick Berlin, Carl Helm, Aubrey Eads, Lois Long and Joe Moore. About the place was the aroma of ham boiled in port, duck garnished with orange, and sauces orchestrated from the rarest shrimps and caviar.

Chop suey places usually look so deserted that many wonder how they pay rent. This is especially true of those off the beaten path. Sometimes they have only a half dozen customers an evening, apparently. But the chop sueys, like the Long Island suburbs in the summer time, enjoy a week-end boom Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights and into the dawn they have a brisk and steady patronage. Chop suey in the average mind is never considered as a regular diet. Rather it is associated with the spirit of caper—a lark. Another steady patronage of the chop sueys are the boys and girls who have been "kicking the gong around." They have unquenchable thirst and may sit in booths and drink all the water they want. Chinese waiters understand and think nothing of it.

Just the other day I happened to tune in on a performance announced as Thomas (Fats) Waller. I don't know his history, but from voice and mannerisms I judge he's a burly son of Ham. He gives the effect, so often pronounced among African performers, of having more fun than his audience. His work strikes me as the epitome of all the first-chop rag-time pianists from Ben Harney down. Every trick of syncopation is at left finger tips and he surrounds it with an orgiastic negro happiness that makes such monkeyshines a delight.

One of the best of the Paul Whiteman yarns concerns an engagement in Oklahoma City. A small town impresario nearby wired: "For $100 how much of your orchestra will you send to play a local dance?" He replied: "A piccolo player and two sheets of music."

Heredity Is Factor In Baldness

In a barber shop recently I overheard an amusing conversation between a customer and a barber.

A bald-headed gentleman was inquiring about the various tonics displayed in the shop.

After listening to the claims made for the various mixtures the customer chose one of them.

As it was being sprayed up on his shining pate he remarked: "I suppose it will be about as successful as all the other tonics I have used."

It was evident that this man had made many previous attempts to grow hair on his bald spot. If he had taken half as good care of his scalp before losing his hair, it may well be he would not have become bald.

The actual cause of baldness is not known. But when the hair ceases to grow it is due to withering and death of the hair follicles.

This condition may follow neglect or persistence of certain disorders of the scalp, such as dandruff, ringworm or eczema.

Sudden loss of hair is often the result of some constitutional disorder, or a disturbance of the thyroid gland.

Baldness has always been more common among men than women. Yet it is of interest to learn that baldness has increased among women since bobbed hair has become so popular.

Perhaps this confirms the old theory that destruction of the hair follicles follows close cropping of hair and daily use of water on the hair.

Personally I do not fully accept this view.

Heart Action a Factor, Too

It is difficult to explain why one man will become bald at 40 years while another will retain his hair to a good old age. Because baldness frequently occurs in certain families it is probable that heredity plays an important role in this condition.

Perhaps more important is the action of the heart; if it beats strongly the blood is forced to the scalp, reaching every individual hair root.

I cannot overstate the importance of a clean and healthy scalp as one way to prevent baldness. Care of the scalp should begin at an early age. Hair washing should not be indulged in excessively, because it may remove too much of the natural oil.

I am often asked what is the best treatment for dandruff in children and how may the growth of hair be stimulated. My advice is to keep the scalp clean. If the scalp shows a slight crust or dandruff apply warm water and a pure soap. Do not repeat the shampoo more frequently than once a week.

Between shampoos the scalp should be kept thoroughly cleansed with a simple hair tonic and by daily brushings. The comb and brush should be carefully cleansed and used by only one person. Avoid greasy and alcoholic ointments, lotions or salves that are claimed to be "marvelous hair restorers." They are often more harmful than beneficial.

"BEACH BEAUTY" by ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER XXII

noon there was a small package in her plate. It bore a card her name. Kay looked across table at Harrow. He seemed used in something else. He looked at Spike Winch. He grinned enigmatically. So she was a wristwatch, slender and graceful, obviously very expensive. In the box was another which said:
"I'll keep better watch on you. And you may use this I that I do. Earl!"
He had to smile. But she was grasped and a bit bewildered.
"I," she said accusingly.
"You shouldn't have done this."
"Why not? I am a great and believer in the old fashioned of punctuality. When on way to work in the morning, I'm able to think as you over a second egg of the taskmaster who awaits you.
After all, you see, the act is more than rank selfishness. It's a Harrow trait."
"I," she said.
"I," she suggested, reaching for it and adjusting it for her.
He helped her put it on,
held her hand at arm's length admiration.
"Oh boy! Oh boy!" he exclaimed. "A honey—and I like the it too, Earl!"
Her lunch Kay waited until now was alone. "I appreciate so much your giving me the one," she said, "but I'm afraid I didn't accept it."
"The police was consistent. 'I'm retorted cheerfully. "But it's not?"
That was really hard to explain.
"I couldn't very well say that I didn't want to accept the watch because she was still hurt and a bit grumpy. That would be admission
I didn't believe his story out Ida and the aspirin, and the fact was she didn't know what to do. Nor could she explain that I didn't want to be in the position of having received a gift from a Harrow under any circumstances. Somehow, the gesture of giving her that watch seemed to her out the stories she had heard about the man. An innocent enough gesture, giving a girl a wristwatch, but might it not be only a guinea? And might not her acceptance be an invitation to confession? She wondered. Any of these speculations might be wrong; all that together might be right.
"I," she said simply, "because I feel that I should."
"Perfectly all right, Kay," he said. "Not angry with me, though?"
"No," she admitted.
"Perfectly all right then?"
"But Kay wondered if she had heard. Maybe she was angry with him. Oh, why in heaven's name would she be, though? That was not worried her. Was there a guinea coming over her that made her prone to jealousy and spite?
She couldn't be, she told herself, in the next moment, there said. Better not to think about it. Let her keep one's feet firmly on the ground.
That afternoon, alone for a while in the boat, she took stock. In a way hers was not a pleasant position. Really, she was obligated to Harrow and she hated the feeling it prevented her from thinking freely and acting with freedom.
Whatever the situation might be,
there was always the thought that Harrow had made a job for her, and halfway promised to help her with a career. The more she thought of it and of his calm gesture in offering her the watch, the grayer she became. Did he think he could treat her as he might any silly little charmer? A slap in the face, then a wristwatch as a penance. Not for her.
Spike came in. "Matter with you and the boss?" he asked.
"Nothing," Kay said coolly.
"Excuse me."
"Nothing to excuse you for."
"Well, that's good. Thought you might be miffed at me, too."
"I'm not 'miffed' at anybody."
"I declared with pointed precision of diction.
Spike sat down opposite her and took out a fresh cigar. Nipping off the tip, he studied her through his eyes.
"Earl probably thinks you're sore,
though," he remarked.
"Why should he think anything of the kind?"

"Because you wouldn't take the watch."
"Oh, and so you think so, too?"
"I'm not paid to think of you."
Spike was being pleasant, so pleasant Kay could not take offense. "I'm paid to think of Earl and to make the gu-rat pu-blic think of him."
"I see."
"That isn't saying I don't think about you, baby."
"So?"
He nodded, grinning challengingly.
"Any thinking I do of you is for little Spike's benefit, though. That's outside of working hours. Get it?
"Well, it's not especially subtle,
you know."
"And, having done some thinking about you, I want to tell you something."
"If you must."
"Things are kind of tough."
"What things?"
"Things. People. He made a vague gesture, fluttering his open hand beside his head. "Trouble around here."
"But how does that concern me?
That is, if you're thinking of what I am."
"I'm thinking about the hoods that have been tailing Earl."
"That's what I mean."
"Well, it's liable to concern you."
Kay frankly stared at Spike Winch.
"Concern me?" she asked. "How could it concern me? They seem to be following Mr. Harrow, but I fail to see how that could possibly concern his secretary—unless perhaps someone of them took a shot at him and it happened to hit me accidentally."
"Any thing that hits you," Spike said grimly, "won't hit you accidentally."
She could see that the bantam-like Spike was solemnly earnest.
"Why, what do you mean, Spike?"
"What do you know about it?"
"I mean just what I say. And I don't know half enough about it to suit me. But I got a pretty good notion that I know what these birds are after and who they are. And to get what they're after they're just as like as not to grab you. Do you get it?"
"You mean—kidnap me?"
Spike nodded.
"Well—can't something be done about it? I mean, this is a law-abiding town, and after all, what are police for?"
"Earl doesn't want any police.
He's funny like that."
Instant suspicion flashed through Kay's mind. "Tell me, Spike—is he mixed up in anything?"
"He's mixed up in something all right, but his angle's okay, if that's what you mean. He isn't in any racket."
"Then why doesn't he call in the police?"
"He has called in private dicks, and he'd probably call in the coppers if he thought it would do any good at this stage of the game. But it won't and he knows it." Spike's eyes grew distant and his voice took on a reminiscent tone. "Up in New York last season," he continued, "some hoods and Earl had a run in. He could have called the police in right then, but he didn't—not till it was all over. And there were three hood funerals."
"Do you mean—?"
Spike nodded benignly. "Two big ones and a little one. I got the little one myself."
Kay found it hard to believe what she was hearing. Yet here stood Spike Winch, telling her this and obviously not joking in the least.
"Earl believes you can do things better yourself when you're dealing with mugs who don't know there is a law anyway. Sometimes I think he actually likes this kind of thing.
And he gets enough chances, that's sure, a man in his position."
"And now you think I'm liable to be drawn into it?" Kay said.
"That's what I said," Spike replied. "I wish I didn't think so."
"What had I better do?"
He shrugged. "Just see that you aren't out alone in dark places. See that your doors are locked nights.
In other words keep yourself off any spots that may be lying around.
That's about all I can say. Earl'll have somebody watch your house."
"Spike," Kay said, "I suppose I ought to be scared to death."
"But you're not?" he said, grinning.
"No, I'm not. I'm excited, of course, and it doesn't sound like a picnic, but I'm not really as scared as I am thrilled. Of course, I haven't been shot at or anything

yet. But it's just the idea of some excitement."
Spike clicked his tongue and shook his head sadly. "You're as bad as he is," he remarked. "Look.
Don't tell Earl I shot off my face.
He may want to break it in his own way. See?"
"All right, Spike. And thanks for breaking it in yours."
"Don't mention it," he said pointedly.
Harrow did break it in his own way later that afternoon.
"There's something you should know," he began. "I'm being bothered by some inconsequential rascals.
If you don't already realize it—which I'm sure you do—I'm laughing easily. Now please don't think I'm being melodramatic.
Think, because it's the last thing I'd think of. There's a little possibility that these fellows may annoy you merely because you've a connection with my boat and my affairs here.
Their first thought would be:
"We'll see what we can do with him through the girl." Do you see?
Very much as in a gangster movie.
But unfortunately, very real. So I would suggest that you come and stay on the yacht nights where you'll be protected. Please don't think I'm trying deliberately to frighten you. I hope there's nothing to it, but I wouldn't think of letting you go on without being warned and given at least some protection. In fact, it might be the best thing if you merely left town for a little while. I'd arrange it for you."
"Well, I appreciate your concern," Kay said. "And it all sounds very exciting, but I can't believe it can be so bad."
Harrow's face was grave; he had dropped his light manner.
"Believe me, please," he said.
"Very well, I do. But I don't propose to leave town."
"Then come aboard the yacht.
You'll be under no obligation as far as your social life is concerned. Just a precaution. The yacht is well guarded and can't be approached very well during the night."
"Well, thank you," Kay said.
"And I'll think it over and do whatever seems best."
She knew, though, that she had utterly no intention of staying on the yacht. Somehow, she preferred any danger there might be at home to staying under the same roof with both Spike and Harrow now that affairs had taken this shape. After all, couldn't this be merely a ruse to get her to stay aboard? Kay had to smile to herself at the thought; it seemed so melodramatic as the idea of her being in danger. It was all very peculiar, though Harrow's attention to her,
his slighting her at the dance, his gift of the watch, and now this.
Kay wished she really could believe one thing and hold that belief, but she couldn't; she was too full now of doubt and suspicion of everybody. There was another little gathering on the yacht that night.
Ida Campbell, Keith Pitts and a few of the others dropped in and Harrow appeared at Kay's to bring her back.
"I don't know," she said. "I'm rather tired—"
"Don't need to stay long. Just slip anything on. It's not a party, just a little session."
Kay finally agreed and rode back with him to the boat, still trying to be as business-like and distant as possible without actually appearing insolent. That affair of the swimming pool dance and the watch offered as a bribe still rankled in her.
At the boat they were sitting about sipping highballs or dancing to the radio. As the evening passed it gave indication of becoming a party after all. Everyone seemed to be having a good time and no one thought of going home. Even Kay swallowed her resentment and entered into the spirit of it.
Spike danced her out on deck and away from the others.
"Earl told you, didn't he?" he said, stopping to lean on the rail and contemplate the gently lap-ping water.
"Yes," she said.
"Wanted you to come and stay on the boat?"
"Yes, why?"
"I figured he would."
She turned to Spike and looked him searchingly in the eye.
"What about it?" she said.
"What about what?"
"Never mind."
"All right," Spike paused. "Tell you something funny," he said.
"What?"
"The parts we were waiting for came today. Cap Johnson says we're all set to shove off."
"Then, you're going?"
"I'd be the last to know. I only work here. But looks like we ought to."
"Then if I came on the boat I'd have to go with the cruise—down to Havana, after all?"
"Don't see how it could be otherwise."
"He didn't tell me that."
"Lots of things he didn't tell you.
Bue he's all right."
Evidently Spike had taken a few more drinks than usual. Kay decided. He seldom was so candid where his employer was concerned.
Leaning toward her, he said, "And I'm all right—in my dizzy way."
"Of course you are, Spike," she said nervously.
"And you're all right."
"Well—thank you," and she laughed, wriggling away from his arms.
But he was too strong. His arms folded her close to him and crushed out her breath. "Don't mind me," he whispered. "I couldn't help this if I wanted to. And I don't want to."
"Spike!" The word shot, terse, cold, sharp.
Kay felt Spike's arms release her,
looked up, and saw Earl Harrow, his eyes narrow, his thin lips smiling rigidly.

Screen Fashions for Milady

By MARIE MAROT

IF YOU ADMIRE that stunning afternoon frock as worn by your favorite screen star in her newest opus, the chances are that you will soon be able to wear it. Certain manufacturers have obtained the right to copy these star screen modes and they are available at your favorite shop in well made but reasonably priced copies. Here are gems culled from the newest movies, all of them sensible frocks, all eminently wearable. Even if you don't perch on a piano you can wear Helen Morgan's frock made for her new picture. It is in black wool with collar, cuffs and sleeve lining of white silk or alpaca. Margo, a lovely newcomer to the screen, is going to make fashion news if her frocks are any criterion. Here is her green silk tunic frock with heavy gold clips. The black satin-back crepe gown with a handsome cowl neckline was made for Karen Morley, but is now being made expressly for you.

TODAY'S PATTERN

"BUTTONS-UP-THE-BACK" FOR
CHIC AND FLATTERY
Pattern 1938

When a dress that buttons up the back to fashion, adds a wide collar, cavalier cuffs and a pleated jabot, the effect, as you can see, is something to stand up and cheer about! In this frock, the jabot slips through a slash and gives a gay air to the simple bodice—a neat belt defines the nicely modeled waistline—and the skirt, according to the dictates of the mode, is slim as a reed. For a bit of under-the-cowl flattery, make it of bright diagonally woven wool with taffeta used for collar and cuffs. Or it would be just as smart made of black jersey, with white pique used for a crisply contrasting touch.

Pattern 1938 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3½ yards

Lawmakers Will Permit
Poor Tax Payer A Few Exemptions

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of a series of short articles to illuminate various angles of Ohio's impending retail sales tax.)

COLUMBUS, Dec. 18.—It was far easier for the Ohio legislature to decide what purchases should not be taxed rather than what should be taxed when it adopted the 3 per cent retail sales tax.

These are the exemptions: Purchases by the state or any of its political subdivisions. Purchases of farm produce on farms or purchases of feed, seeds, lime or fertilizer.

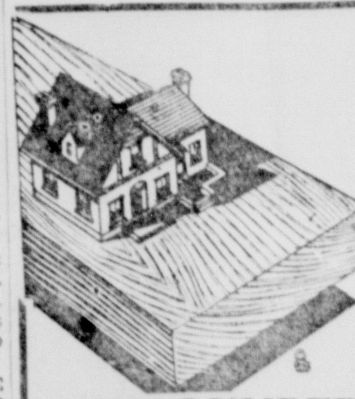

Purchases of newspapers, fluid milk for consumption off the premises of the vendor (this does not exempt the glass of milk with your restaurant luncheon), bread in loaf form, vehicle fuel, liquid fuel, cigars, brewers' wort and malt, beer, wine and spirituous liquor sold by the Ohio department of liquor control.

"Inconsequential" Listed
Purchases of gas, water and electricity.

Purchases of inconsequential tangible elements delivered in connection with services, such as cold cream and facial clay when milady goes to the beauty parlor. A new valve for the family car when it is being overhauled, however, would have to be itemized separately and taxed.

Casual and isolated purchases from persons not regularly acting as vendors, such as the purchase of a used radio from a carpenter.

Purchases of transportation of persons or property. Purchases from charitable and religious organizations, proceeds of which go to philanthropic activities. The profit, however, must go entirely to a philanthropic cause, if the exemption is to be gained.

$46,000 Recovered

The treasure map which Laska desired to have "in case anything happened" was inaccurate as to mileage, according to Feldman. The government subsequently recovered $46,000 in ransom money from new hiding places in Oregon and Washington.

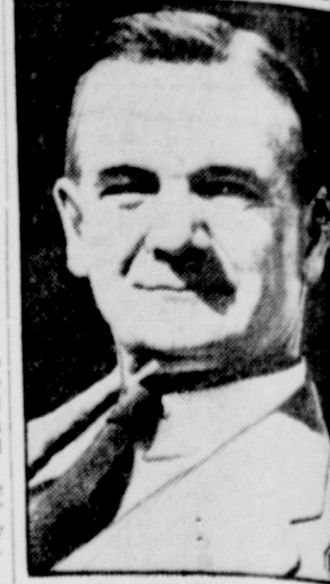

Demanding obedience lest the Bates family "get our throats cut," Feldman told how Laska assertedly suggested the wife and stepson assume Swedish names.

"I'm innocent of this charge," said Laska, peering from behind nose glasses. "I would rather die than reveal the secrets of my clients—and I don't care who those clients may be or how bad they may be."

Laska has skirmished with the law before in his own behalf as well as for others. A slight figure, carefully attired, and once credited with an "hypnotic eye" he always has won his own battles. Often he has won for others against long odds. An acquittal was the result of his defense of Mrs. Verne Sankey, accused of aiding her self-slain husband in the Charles Boettcher kidnapping.

Today Laska girded himself to fight another battle—against a $50,000 bail bond the government demands for his freedom pending trial.

St. Louis Cards With Dean Boys Acclaimed The Best in Any Sport

You Might Debate It, But That's Result of Press Poll, Even Over Galloping Gophers

BY ALAN GOULD, Associated Press Sports Editor.
NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—It seems to be highly debatable in this year's sporting roundup whether it was any harder to beat the celebrated Dean Brothers on the baseball field than it was to tackle Pug Lupu or Stan Kostka, the galloping Gophers, on the gridiron.

Whatever the feeling on this hypothetical issue, the fact today is that the world champion St. Louis Cardinals featuring the Dean boys, emerged the winners over Minnesota's undefeated football champions in the Associated Press poll to determine the outstanding team of 1934. The Cardinals are the third successive major league ball club to be acclaimed the best team of the year, in any sport, by vote of the nation's sports editors and writers, who rate the finishing drive of the National league champions as the greatest in the history of the game.

As one observer expressed it: "You can't crack guys without nerves, like the Deans and Pepper Martin. They never think about losing."

Previous baseball winners were the world champion New York Yankees of 1932 and the Giants of 1933. The last college football team to be voted the No. 1 sports aggregation was Southern California's 1931 eleven.

Compilation of ballots in the biggest country-wide response yet recorded in the annual A. P. poll disclosed a two-team race for votes from start to finish.

Final Vote 109 to 34
Asked to name the three leading teams, in order of preference, 99 out of total of 109 experts cast their No. 1 vote for the Cardinals and 34 put Minnesota's Gophers at the top of the list.

The final standing on points was St. Louis 241, Minnesota 215, because the Gophers ran stronger in second and third place nominations. Minnesota picked up 48 votes for second place and 17 for third while the Cardinals collected 21 and 7, respectively.

Points were figured on the basis of three for first place, two for second and one for third.

Chicago Bears Third
Only four other teams figured in the first-place balloting.

The Chicago Bears received seven votes and finished third in the poll, with 57 points, despite their defeat in the play-off game with the New York Giants for the National Professional football league championship.

The experts took this setback into consideration but decided it could not offset the otherwise remarkable record of the Bears on professional gridirons. The Giants scored only 12 points.

The Detroit Tigers, American league baseball champions, received five first-place ballots and wound up fourth with 42 points. Two observers voted the triumphant United States Walker cup golfers as the most outstanding team while the remaining ballot put Yale's football "Iron Men," the conquerors of Princeton, at the top.

BAER TO FIGHT KING LEVINSKY

Champion Max Expects To Kayo Kingfish at Chicago, Dec. 28

CHICAGO, Dec. 18.—Although he took 30 rounds of battling practice on King Levinsky without getting him off his feet, world heavyweight champion Max Baer thinks he can knock the Kingfish out in four rounds or less. Anyway, he is going to try it.

They have been matched for something a little different in the way of main bouts—a four-rounder at the Chicago stadium Dec. 28. Baer, before he knocked Primo Carnera loose from the title, outpointed Levinsky twice, in 10 rounds at New York, and in 20 rounds at Reno. He didn't, however, manage to tip the verbose Kingfish over.

Denison University Whips Kenyon, 27-22

GRANVILLE, Dec. 18.—Denison university swept to a 27-22 victory over Kenyon here tonight in an Ohio conference game. Klunder's first field goal gave Denison a lead which never was overtaken, although the play was lost throughout. Denison had a light advantage in the center's duel during the first half but the play in the center court was event thereafter.

Golf's Wild Man On A Rampage

Leo Diegel, the big hot and cold man of golf, hasn't been so hot on the links in recent years, but taking that big jump across the Pacific pond to Australia certainly brought on one of Leo's torrid spells.

Golf experts have long maintained that the likable Diegel would be the greatest golfer in the world, if it were not for his nervous, jumpy temperament.

When Leo gets hot, no golfer on earth—not even Jones or Sarazen at their mildly best—can keep up with him as he soars into the golfing stratosphere on one of his dizzy flights of brilliance. But, alas!—the high-strung wizard of the links can also sink to the low depths plumbied by the duffers of golf; for when Diegel is bad, he is awful.

The erratic Philadelphia pro evidently forgot to have his bad moments in the recent Australian money events, for he stood out like Mount Everest over the other American and Australian linksmen. "Eagle" Diegel, they call him, and this time the nickname was no misnomer, for the startling Master Diegel was shooting eagles and birds all over the place, amazing the Aussies no end with his breathtaking links sharpshooting.

Leo didn't get hot soon enough to capture the big Melbourne $25,000 open, but he gave warning to the other pros by finishing second to long-hitting Jimmy Thompson in this great event.

Then he started to go, and from that point on the carnage was terrible. The others—Runyan, Wood, Liffon, Sarazen, Shute, Thompson, Cooper and the rest—were just battling for second money—they didn't have a chance for the top spot with Leo hitting the high spots.

What a man this Diegel is! He won the $5,000 Centenary championship at Melbourne by beating Denny Shute, 2 and 1 in a 36-hole final in which he was 5 down at the close of the morning round; followed this up by taking top honors in the Peninsular Open, and then smashed the ceiling of the golfing by shooting an unbelievable 282—a world's record for any open championship—to win the John Martin purse at Sydney. Nobody can beat that kind of golf!

Ohio Basketball In Brief

Ohio college basketball teams were at work on five courts last night and the scores, when the last toss was made, weren't particularly impressive.

Two Ohio teams lost to two out-of-state teams. Two won and Denison, playing the only strictly Ohio game in the state defeated Kenyon, 27 to 22.

The Denison-Kenyon game was an Ohio conference contest. After scoring the first field goal, Denison was never headed, although the score was close most of the way.

Wittenberg Is Loser
Wittenberg traveled to New Wilmington, Pa., to take a 4 to 23 licking from Westminster. Two young men named Bennett and Hunneke made the game miserable for Wittenberg by scoring 22 of Westminster's total.

At Toledo, St. John's college scored its second victory of the season by trouncing the University of Western Ontario 40 to 20. The Saints took the lead early in the proceedings and were never troubled after that.

An Exciting Contest
Miami engaged Hanover college at Oxford and after leading a good part of the way, lost the game in the last two minutes. Miami led, 18 to 9, at the half. With the timer fingering his gun near the end, Hartley, a Hanover substitute guard, flipped one in as the timer fired, Marowski, another guard, dropped in another. The score was Miami 34, Hanover 37.

Xavier had little trouble in setting down Georgetown (Kentucky) 37 to 21, despite the activities of one Green, Georgetown forward, who made five field goals and three free throws ring for a total of 13 points. The Xavier Reserves had a chance to shine in the last six minutes.

The eight junior league and six senior league teams are composed of players desirous to play basketball, but who lack the varsity punch Lewis Smith, who is supervising the boys, is making no attempt to coach the players, merely following the rule of learning by playing.

Results Last Night
Each team will play twice a week, on Mondays and Thursdays. In the Junior league last night, the Aces downed the Panthers 27-20, the Celtics dumped the Salemites, 27-11, the Slowpokes won easily from the Chiselers, 20-5, and the Maroons took the Ramblers 19-11.

Leading scorers were Whitcomb for the Maroons, Kimes and Nestor for the Slowpokes, Oana with seven for the Celtics, Dolansky of the Panthers with 14, while J. Campbell led the way for the Aces with 16.

In the A league, the Convicts beat the Spartans 26-12 with Liebhart showing the way for the losers and West for the winners. The Dubs did not live up to their name in trouncing the Pigeons, 26-12. Patterson and Cleland made 10 and 9 points respectively for the winners. In the final game a three-minute overtime was necessary for the Zippers to eke out a well deserved win over the Misfits. Walker broke lose from Smith to score five points for his team in the extra session.

Schmeling-Hamas Bout In Germany Muddles Heavyweight Situation

Fight Manager Charlie Harvey Slips One Over On Jimmy Johnston, Madison Square Garden Supervisor and Old Foeman

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—Charlie Harvey, cagey old fight manager, chuckled behind his fierce moustachios today.

He had his old foe, Jimmy Johnston, Madison Square Garden maestro, square behind the eight ball.

By singing his boy, Steve Hamas, the collegiate heavyweight, to meet Max Schmeling at Hamburg, Germany, March 10, Harvey not only plucked the match right out of Johnston's lap, but thoroughly gummed up the Garden's well-laid plans for a heavyweight elimination tournament.

Johnston and his colleagues had hoped to match the pair and attract $150,000 gate to Miami next February.

Now, with Der Maxie and the ex-Penn State star out of the picture, and with Primo Carnera barnstorming in South America, it is doubtful if the winter season will produce a first class heavyweight scrap for the Garden, let alone take the blanket off a real contender for Max Baer's heavyweight title.

CRIMSON TIDE DRILLS IN MUD
Alabama's Driving Like Satan For New Year's Classic

(By Associated Press)
UNIVERSITY, Ala., Dec. 18.—A break in weather was the hope today of Coach Frank Thomas and his Crimson Tide squad as time for the "hop off" for the west coast for a New Year's day game in Rose Bowl approached.

Although the field was heavy and slick yesterday from rain, the squad went through a long dummy scrimmage against Stanford formations.

Except for Bob Ed Morrow, husky guard with a broken nose, the Tide was in good shape, and in the words of a sub, "driving like Satan."

Damascus Squad Wallops Sebring
Special to The News
DAMASCUS, Dec. 18.—The Damascus Quakers basketball squad handed the Sebring Royal China quintet of Sebring a 29 to 20 licking here last night.

In the preliminary, however, the Goshen township ex-Highs were beaten 19 to 17 by the Knox township Merchants.

Francis Lederer And Good Cast In "Pursuit of Happiness" At State

WHEN you see Francis Lederer making garden love to Joan Bennett in scenes of the film "Pursuit of Happiness" at the State today and Wednesday he'll be making real love—but for another man, in much the same fashion that John Alden went courting for Miles Standish in Colonial times.

Markey Is Scenarist

The man whose suit Lederer is plying is Scenarist Gene Markey who wrote the tender speeches for the star to recite to his own wife, Miss Bennett, who in private life is Mrs. Markey. Markey, a handsome sort of person, stated before the filming of the picture that he was going to impress her with the words he has always been able to write but unable to say. Wherein lies the reason for the unusually good love scenes in "Pursuit of Happiness."

It is a quaint story, well acted by Lederer, the Czech star of so many stage successes, Miss Bennett, Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles. The scenes of the Colonial homes are beautifully done—lovely old maple furniture, pewter tableware, hennaed glasses, hooked rugs and the like. The film is an engaging bit of devility, unafraid and impudently piquant. It's deliciously funny, with satiric comedy, racy and saucy and chuckful of clever lines and piquant situations—nothing like it has ever been screened.

Good Story

Adapted from the Broadway state success of the same name by Lawrence Langner it is a comedy of love and fashion of early American times. Lederer is cast as one of the young Hessians, who, history tells us, were unwillingly conscripted into the service of King George III, in his war against the rebellious Colonies. When he gets to his destination he learns that the colonists have declared their independence in a historic document that guarantees every man "the pursuit of happiness."

In his quaint fashion the youth interprets the phrase to mean running after happiness, and so appeals to his fancy that he straightaway deserts the Britishers to seek happiness with the colonists. His adventures begin when he is found hiding in the Kirkland hayloft. He is taken in by the family and falls in love with the daughter, Prudence.

STURGEON BAY, Wis.—A centennial in honor of the coming of the first white settler to Door county in 1835, is being announced here by the Increase Claflin committee. Increase Claflin settled on this peninsula in May, 1835, at a point later known as Little Sturgeon. He remained nine years before moving to Fish Creek. Prior to settling here, Claflin had lived at Kaukauna and Green Bay, both of which were fur trading posts at that time.

WALLA WALLA, Wash.—Edwin Eastman harvested a second grape crop from a blue Isabella vine at his home Thanksgiving day. An early crop ripened in September. The vine bore ripe fruit, green fruit and blossoms Thanksgiving day.
